The Secrets Of Getting Company Cars For Employees Revealed

There are many advantages to getting company cars for employees. Here is a list of some ways this can benefit both, the employer and the employee. Most of the employees issued these type of vehicles are salesman or those who require a lot of traveling for the job.

Providing business vehicles to an employee can help an employer supervise them. Often times employers require their staff to drive around to different areas as part of their duties. Salesmen often have to drive to different locations to find possible leads. Some salesmen can easily take detours and go home for the day instead of searching for leads. A GPS in the vehicle allows the employer to pinpoint the exact location of his or her salesmen.

A business vehicle is also a benefit for the business owner when tax season comes around. Providing business vehicles allows the business owner to deduct any expenses of the car, including insurance, repair costs on their taxes. The employer, of course will have to keep receipts of all these expenses in order to be able to deduct them.

Employers can use the business vehicle as an incentive in order to lure in good candidates to fill the positions. The vehicle can also help when it comes to employee retention in the business. A person who was given a business vehicle for the job will not quit the job as easy as someone who was not given a vehicle. Walking away from the job, will also mean walking away from the vehicle they use. Therefore staff tends to stay longer with the position, than those who do not have a vehicle issued by the company.

An employee can also benefit from receiving a vehicle from the business owners. They can benefit from it when they are allowed to use it for personal use. This allows them to use the vehicle even after hours, to run errands for their household. The vehicle can also be used to simply go to the store to shop. If the employee plans to stay in the position for a long time, then they can also sell the vehicle they were already using and pocket the money.

Most people struggle to find transportation to work, once their vehicle starts having problems. With a business vehicle the employee does not have to worry about getting it fixed. The business owner will usually get the vehicle fixed and issue out a rental car until it is ready. The business also covers the gas expense that is used for the work place. The only time the employee has to pay for the gas is when they are using it for personal use.

These are some benefits that come from getting company cars for employees. Both the employer and the employee will benefit from having a business car issued out. A person receiving a business vehicle, however needs to have a clean driving record. If the clean driving record changes after the point of hire, and employee may lose their job.
